Taft Rips Steel

Ohioan Lashes Price Hikes

WASHINGTON, March 2—Sen. Taft (R) Ohio, today blasted the steel industry for increasing prices at a time when commodity markets were breaking and pointed out that the government had urged all industry to withhold such boosts.

Taft engaged in a sharp exchange with Benjamin Fairless, president of the United States Steel Corp., who defended semi-finished steel products as being in the public interest.

The Ohio senator, a leading GOP presidential aspirant, told Fairless that the "moral effect on the country" of the industry's action was that "a resumption in the upward trend of prices was being initiated" by steel interests.

Fairless had defended the recent $5-a-ton steel price boost as in the public interest but warned that a third-round wage boost will bring further price increases that will add to the inflationary spiral.

He said the steel industry's recent price hike applied to less than nine percent of its total shipments and branded the inflationary influence of the adjustment as "grossly exaggerated."

Fairless told the joint congressional economic committee investigating the increase:

"I am convinced that the recent increase of one-quarter of a cent per pound in the price of this semi-finished material is too small and unimportant in itself to pave the way toward a higher price level for the various articles of everyday use made out of steel."

THE STEEL executive forecast a general steel price rise, however, with distressing inflationary consequences if wages take a third postwar jump in the coming months.

Fairless said U. S. Steel believes costs and prices in general are "too high for the good of the nation" and will give "earnest consideration" to slashing prices when convinced that costs no longer are on the upward trend.

His statement conflicted with the already announced decrease.

Driver Gets Light Fine

Mrs. Edith Gaines, of near Asheville, was fined $10 and costs in the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller Monday night as the result of an accident in which Police Officer John McGinnis was injured Feb. 23. Mrs. Gaines was fined for non-possession of a driver's license.

Receiving a suspended fine of $10 was her husband, Herbert, who permitted her to drive his vehicle without a driver's license.

Officer McGinnis, present at the hearing, failed to press any charges against the pair, saying "it was probably as much my fault as it was yours."

The pair was released with the payment of the fine imposed on Mrs. Gaines.

Sailor Killed, 14 Injured As Blast Rips Destroyer

LONG BEACH, Cal., March 2—The Navy announced today that a leaky container set off an acetylene tank resulting in the death of a seaman and injuring 14 others on the returning Destroyer Duncan.

The Duncan limped into port early today, a 32-foot gash on its starboard side, from the explosion which occurred yesterday 200 miles off the California coast.

The explosion, which occurred in the shipfitters shop on the second deck, fortunately "exploded upwards and outwards" from ammunition lockers. It ruptured depth charges on the deck but did not set them off.

The Duncan is one of four ships which left Sunday reportedly for the atom bomb tests at Eniwetok. It was heading toward its destination with the Aircraft Carrier Bairoko and a communications vessel and a tender.

A NAVY spokesman said "only the heroic and quick action by the men working waist deep in the flooded compartments rescuing the injured and using all available gear, including mattresses to stem incoming waters, saved the ship from serious injury."

The Bairoko followed the destroyer a portion of the way home but continued on its trip

New Holland Man Seriously Hurt

Sherman Thacker, 20, of New Holland, was reported resting well at University Hospital in Columbus from a 12-gauge shotgun wound in his left chest.

It was believed the youth accidentally shot himself Monday in the bedroom of his home while his mother, Mary, and an older brother, Jack, sat in an adjoining room.

He was rushed to Berger hospital in a Kirkpatrick ambulance and later transferred to the Columbus hospital.

Panel Plans Investigation Of Top U.S. Atom Scientist

WASHINGTON, March 2—Rep. Elston (R) Ohio declared today that the joint committee on atomic energy "undoubtedly" will investigate charges that Dr. Edward U. Condon, government atomic scientist, is a member of a subversive, Communist front organization.

Elston said that the report made by a House unAmerican activities subcommittee accusing the director of the National Bureau of Standards of "Communist sympathies" probably will be discussed by the atomic energy group when it meets today.

The congressman is a member of the atomic group and chairman of a House armed services subcommittee.

Condon denied the charges and the Commerce department said an investigation by its loyalty board found "no reasonable ground for believing that Dr. Condon is disloyal to the government of the United States." The loyalty board report was submitted Feb. 24.

The unAmerican activities subcommittee listed Condon, head of one of the government's most important research agencies concerned with atomic energy, of being a member of the American-Soviet Science Society.

The report declared the society an affiliate of the National Council of Soviet-American Friendship "which was recently cited as a subversive organization by Attorney General Tom Clark."

Reds Ready War, Claim

Bullitt Warns Of Soviet Aim

WASHINGTON, March 2—William C. Bullitt, former ambassador to the Soviet Union, told Congress today that Russia is "in preparation for attack on the United States."

The former diplomat warned the House foreign affairs committee that "our country is in danger."

He said the Soviet Union is consolidating its hold on Europe and building up strength for war with this country.

Bullitt testified at a public hearing on aid for China. He said:

"The strategy of world conquest of the Soviet Union springs from the premise that it is not yet strong enough to risk war with the United States but must build up its domestic war potential and bring new strategic areas, resources, and peoples under its control before attacking us."

"IN PREPARATION for attack on the United States, it is therefore consolidating its hold on the 130 million Europeans it had dominated since 1939."

The former ambassador declared that if the United States should permit the Communists to take over China, it would open the way for an attack on this country "by overwhelming masses of Stalin-driven slaves."

Bullitt severely criticized Secretary of State George Marshall. He declared that Marshall, when he was in China in 1946 as the personal representative of the President, "dishonored the pledge of the United States" to arm the Chinese government "as a means of pressure" to compel Chiang Kai-Shek to take Communists into his government.

Republicans Spur Drive To Pass Rights Ruling

WASHINGTON, March 2—The Republican-dominated House judiciary committee is expected to spur the Southern revolt over civil rights today by speedily approving an anti-lynching bill requested by President Truman.

Southern members of the committee conceded they have no chance to block action on the measure. There are only four protesting Southern congressmen on the 26-member committee.

Rep. Colmer (D) Miss., chairman of the Southern protest group in the House, however, summoned a meeting of the 12-member executive group today to map strategy when the bill goes to the floor for House debate.

Thus far, the Southerners have been able to muster a 74-vote bloc pledged to oppose the civil rights bills asked by the President.

The House Republican leadership has flashed the green light for the anti-lynching bill to be cleared for House action "at the earliest possible moment."

Democrats Believe Doughton Bill Can Be Passed Over Veto

WASHINGTON, March 2—Some Democratic leaders in Congress forecast today that the Doughton Plan for a tax cut of about $4.5 billion could be passed over President Truman's veto.

These leaders said sentiment appears to be swinging toward the Doughton proposal and that prospects favor its enactment over what appears to be certain disapproval by the President. The plan would:

1. Cut income tax rates from 15 percent in the lowest brackets to five percent in the top brackets.
2. Increase from $500 to $800 the personal exemption for each taxpayer and dependent.
3. Permit married couples in all states to split their incomes to reduce taxes.

This plan was rejected by House Republicans, who jammed through the Knutson $6.5 billion tax cut measure. This bill is much the same as the Doughton proposal except that it would cut income tax rates 10 to 30 percent.

The Senate finance committee resumed its hearings on the House bill today by calling a former undersecretary of the treasury, John W. Hanes, as the first witness.

Hanes, who served as undersecretary of the treasury during part of the Roosevelt regime, long has been an ardent advocate of tax reduction as essential to business incentive and stable prosperity.

The final form of the tax bill will not begin to evolve until the finance committee concludes hearings March 10 and revises the House measure.

First 5 Years Of UMT To Cost About $8 Billion

WASHINGTON, March 2—Secretary of Defense James Forrestal estimated today that Universal Military Training would cost the United States more than $8 billion during the first five years of its formation.

Forrestal advised the chairman of the House and Senate armed services committees that the military establishment is prepared to draft the first inductees July 1, 1949.

He added significantly that the initial inductions could be accelerated "in case of emergency," but made no other reference to the troubled international situation.

The cabinet officer advised Rep. Andrews (R) N. Y. and Sen. Gurney (R) S. D., that the Army, Navy and Air Force estimated the compulsory peacetime military training program would cost eight billion 244 million 900 thousand dollars from July 1, 1948 through June 30, 1953.

FORRESTAL declared that after the 1953 fiscal year "it is assumed that the program will have reached full implementation." From then on, he estimated, UMT would cost one billion 668 million 100 thousand dollars annually.

President Truman in his budget message to Congress requested $400 million to launch the program during its first year, beginning July 1, and estimated that it would cost "about two billion dollars annually" when in full operation.

Forrestal estimated, however, that the first year's operation would cost $8.4 billion, more than twice that estimated by the President.

Forrestal made no prediction regarding the possibility that Congress would enact UMT this year.

The House armed services committee voted 20 to 0 for legislation authorizing six months of basic training and another six months of advanced training for all youths aged 18 through 20. The legislation has been stymied however, by the House rules committee which has taken no action to clear it to the floor for a vote.

Generals Cited For Illegal Profiteering

DAYTON, March 2—Two generals were charged with defrauding a New York company of $17,000 in the sale of surplus parachutes in a suit on file today in the Dayton district federal court.

The generals were Maj. Gen. Lester T. Miller, retired, former chief of supply of the Air Materiel Command at Wright Field, and Brig. Gen. James Molison, associate director of the War Assets Administration in Washington.

The Ernest Seidelman Corp., of New York, charged that the company which Miller formerly headed, the Miller Aviation Co., Inc., of Dayton, "devised a scheme and artifice to obtain money by means of false and fraudulent pretenses and representations, from purchasers of surplus war material belonging to the United States."

The suit accused Molison of using his office "corruptly, improperly and unlawfully to benefit the defendants."

THE SEIDELMAN Corp. declared that on March 6, 1947, it paid $99,339.50 for 9,071 parachutes, at a price of $11.50 each for 5,753 silk chutes and $10 each for 3,310 others. The suit charged the established WAA price was $9 each.

The suit charged that the Miller company paid the government $81,639 for the parachutes and "fraudulently retaining $17,000.50 for the Dayton corporation."

Ferguson Raps Recreation Fund

COLUMBUS, March 2—A special investigation of all trust funds received by the Columbus recreation department in the last five years was ordered by State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson today following "an expose of apparent misuse" by a Columbus newspaper.

Ferguson said his ace examination would pay particular attention to alleged "expenditures for salaries and expenses for newspaper reporters who were used to publicize the administration of Mayor James A. Rhodes."

The auditor said there also was a question of whether the recreation department had paid admission taxes to the state on softball game tickets and ground rentals to the Columbus state hospital.

The auditor asserted:

"WE ARE GOING to find out just how much of this recreation money was used for personal gain. We are certainly going to investigate thoroughly the extra curricular salary Recreation Director Nick Barack received from the trust funds at the expense of the children of Columbus."

"Records in the department have been more or less a Chinese puzzle—and maybe there is a reason. Rumors have been circulating for some time that Barack and Rhodes have been using recreation funds for disguised political activities while the playgrounds for which the funds were intended have deteriorated into filthy, vulgar cesspools of juvenile delinquency."

Frank Ater Gets First Application

Frank A. Ater of Circleville was the first Pickaway County veteran to complete his Ohio World War II veterans bonus application, James P. Shea, local veterans service officer reported.

Ater was among approximately 257 veterans to complete the forms in the four Circleville distribution centers.

All offices reported a heavy rush the first day with interviews continuing until 11:30 p. m.

Circleville postmaster Hulse Hays warned veterans to be safe and place six cents postage on application envelopes when ready to mail. He reported about 150 went into the mail from here the first day.

First day tabulations: County veterans service office—130 bonus forms completed; American Red Cross—27; Veterans of Foreign Wars—50; and American Legion—50.

Dog Warden Given Boost

Pickaway County commissioners have approved an increase in salary for Harry Riffe, county dog warden, from $118 to $168 per month.

Betty Riffe has been employed by the commissioners as an assistant to her father at $100 per month.

Russian Power Said Real Key

GOP Leaders Set Parley On Aid

WASHINGTON, March 2—Sen. Ball (R) Minn., declared today that the odds are against success for the Marshall Plan until America finds an answer to Russia's "power pressure" on Czechoslovakia and Finland.

Ball will meet tonight with a score of other GOP senators to pass on a series of ERP bill amendments. He insisted today that economic aid is not the conclusive answer to saving Europe.

As the Senate prepared for its second day of debate on the European Recovery Bill, the young Republican asserted:

"Economic aid would not have saved Czechoslovakia or Finland. They're threatened by power—pure and simple. Those people are scared."

AT THE SAME time, Sen. Taft (R) Ohio said the fate of Czechoslovakia would have "no effect" on the ERP bill but would "strengthen" President Truman's request for military aid to China, Greece and Turkey.

House foreign policy leaders favor adding at least China aid to the European Recovery Bill.

Sen. Vandenberg (R) Mich., chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, opened his appeal for passage of the five billion 300 million dollar ERP bill by warning that the "aggressive Communism" which hit Czechoslovakia and Finland actually "threatens all freedom and all security."

Vandenberg was expected to continue the debate by inviting questions on his opening statement. Ball and other senators seeking to modify the aid bill still further were primed to challenge some of its provisions.

Ball already has suggested that the five billion 300 million dollar first-year figure be cut to three and a half billions. But the Senate group he heads has other proposed changes.

Czech Purge Extending To Colleges, Claim

PRAGUE, March 2—The Communist-instigated purge in Czechoslovakia was reported today to have reached into the nation's universities.

The move was believed the first step in a far-reaching campaign to mold the minds of Czechoslovakia's youth along Communist lines.

One student informant declared that many of college age who resent Communist seizure of government control have attempted to flee the country and that a total of 500 were caught over the weekend trying to slip across the border.

At the Institute of Technology a sign has appeared listing the names of students expelled for anti-Communist political activities.

According to student reports, Communist Education Minister Zdenek Nejedly told a secret meeting of university professors that there must be a complete reorganization of the educational system.

Nejedly reportedly said: "There is too much rotten reactionary intelligentsia in the nation's universities. It has got to be changed into a healthy intelligentsia. There must be purification of the student personnel."

City Probe Is Ordered

Ferguson Raps Recreation Fund

COLUMBUS, March 2—A special investigation of all trust funds received by the Columbus recreation department in the last five years was ordered by State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson today following "an expose of apparent misuse" by a Columbus newspaper.

Ferguson said his ace examiners would pay particular attention to alleged "expenditures for salaries and expenses for newspaper reporters who were used to publicize the administration of Mayor James A. Rhodes."

The auditor said there also was a question of whether the recreation department had paid admission taxes to the state on softball game tickets and ground rentals to the Columbus state hospital.

The auditor asserted:

"WE ARE GOING to find out just how much of this recreation money was used for personal gain. We are certainly going to investigate thoroughly the extra curricular salary Recreation Director Nick Barack received from the trust funds at the expense of the children of Columbus."

"Records in the department have been more or less a Chinese puzzle—and maybe there is a reason. Rumors have been circulating for some time that Barack and Rhodes have been using recreation funds for disguised political activities while the playgrounds for which the funds were intended have deteriorated into filthy, vulgar cesspools of juvenile delinquency."

Frank Ater Gets First Application

Frank A. Ater of Circleville was the first Pickaway County veteran to complete his Ohio World War II veterans bonus application, James P. Shea, local veterans service officer reported.

Ater was among approximately 257 veterans to complete the forms in the four Circleville distribution centers.

All offices reported a heavy rush the first day with interviews continuing until 11:30 p. m.

Circleville postmaster Hulse Hays warned veterans to be safe and place six cents postage on application envelopes when ready to mail. He reported about 150 went into the mail from here the first day.

First day tabulations: County veterans service office—130 bonus forms completed; American Red Cross—27; Veterans of Foreign Wars—50; and American Legion—50.

Dog Warden Given Boost

Pickaway County commissioners have approved an increase in salary for Harry Riffle, county dog warden, from $118 to $168 per month.

Betty Riffle has been employed by the commissioners as an assistant to her father at $100 per month.

Russian Power Said Real Key

GOP Leaders Set Parley On Aid

WASHINGTON, March 2—Sen. Ball (R) Minn., declared today that the odds are against success for the Marshall Plan until America finds an answer to Russia's "power pressure" on Czechoslovakia and Finland.

Ball will meet tonight with a score of other GOP senators to pass on a series of ERP bill amendments. He insisted today that economic aid is not the conclusive answer to saving Europe.

As the Senate prepared for its second day of debate on the European Recovery Bill, the young Republican asserted:

"Economic aid would not have saved Czechoslovakia or Finland. They're threatened by power—pure and simple. Those people are scared."

AT THE SAME time, Sen. Taft (R) Ohio said the fate of Czechoslovakia would have "no effect" on the ERP bill but would "strengthen" President Truman's request for military aid to China, Greece and Turkey.

House foreign policy leaders favor adding at least China aid to the European Recovery Bill.

Sen. Vandenberg (R) Mich., chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, opened his appeal for passage of the five billion 300 million dollar ERP bill by warning that the "aggressive Communism" which hit Czechoslovakia and Finland actually "threatens all freedom and all security."

Vandenberg was expected to continue the debate by inviting questions on his opening statement. Ball and other senators seeking to modify the aid bill still further were primed to challenge some of its provisions.

Ball already has suggested that the five billion 300 million dollar first-year figure be cut to three and a half billions. But the Senate group he heads has other proposed changes.

Czech Purge Extending To Colleges, Claim

PRAGUE, March 2—The Communist-instituted purge in Czechoslovakia was reported today to have reached into the nation's universities.

The move was believed the first step in a far-reaching campaign to mold the minds of Czechoslovakia's youth along Communist lines.

One student informant declared that many of college age who resent Communist seizure of government control have attempted to flee the country and that a total of 500 were caught over the weekend trying to slip across the border.

At the Institute of Technology a sign has appeared listing the names of students expelled for anti-Communist political activities.

According to student reports, Communist Education Minister Zdenek Nejedly told a secret meeting of university professors that there must be a complete reorganization of the educational system.

Nejedly reportedly said: "There is too much rotten reactionary intelligentsia in the nation's universities. It has got to be changed into a healthy intelligentsia. There must be purification of the student personnel."

approved by the full committee. It was to be sent to President Truman with a request that Dr. Condon be dismissed or that Secretary of Commerce Harrison give full reason why he has been retained in his department.

Because of the urgency of the report, the full committee may hold an emergency session in the hospital room of Chairman Thomas (R) N. J. to give it full approval. Thomas is ill in Walter Reed hospital.

The report charged that Condon is "one of the weakest links in our atomic security" and cited a letter from J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, in which he stated that the scientist had been in contact with an alleged Russian agent.

Firemen Given False Alarm

Cincinnati firemen were called on a wild goose chase Monday evening when they rushed to the north end in search of a non-existent blaze.

At 6 p. m. an excited feminine voice appealed to them over the phone to rush at once to the house of George Green, Cincinnati policeman who lives on North Court street. They rushed, but—no fire.

They returned to the firehouse 15 minutes later to find the woman had called them back to tell them she was mistaken.

Mrs. Hare's petition states they were married Feb. 7 at Greenup and since that time her youthful husband has disregarded his marital duties. She also wants her name restored to Rachel E. Speakman.

James Williams has been ordered by Judge William Radcliff in Pickaway County common pleas court to pay $200 for the support of a child born to Bernice Funk. The court further ordered Williams to pay $5 per week until further notice for the child's maintenance.

Suspect Held In Local Bogus Check Case

One of two men, suspected of passing a bogus check for $1,850 last week at the Clifton Motor Sales for the purchase of a 1946 Mercury, is in custody of Beckley, W. Va., authorities.

Robert C. Lilly, 27, will be returned here by Pickaway County Sheriff Charles Radcliff for probable prosecution. A warrant has been signed for the arrest of Fred Hall of West Virginia, believed to be Lilly's confederate.

Owner of the local garage, Elmer Clifton, said two men handed him a check for $1,850 for the car. When asked to prove the certificate was good, one of the suspects showed Clifton a bank book with deposits that day amounting to $4,054.47.

A check with Salt Creek Valley Bank officials proved that the deposits also were forged. They said three checks had been deposited there in a checking account.

Authorities in Gallipolis and Chillicothe want the men in those cities for passing bad checks, too, Sheriff Radcliff disclosed.

The car purchased with the worthless check has not been located, the sheriff said.

Memorial Lake Not Part Of U.S. Program

An announcement made Tuesday in Columbus regarding the future of the Scioto-Sandusky Conservancy District will have no effect on the future of Pickaway County's long-awaited Memorial Lake and Park, H. A. Rider, state conservation commissioner, has reported.

The announcement, made by C. C. Chambers, the district's chief engineer, declared that no dams would be built unless they were multi-purpose dams and were proven to be "economically justified."

Rider explained that Chambers' statement referred to the federal government's program and that it had no bearing on the local project.

Memorial Lake's future, Rider said, hangs in the balance. So far, the State Board of Control has not released funds for the construction.

Steel Hike Explained

mand of CIO President Philip Murray for "a substantial wage increase" for nearly one million steel workers. Negotiations are expected to start soon.

Fairless said the recent price boost applied only to about two million tons of semi-finished materials in U. S. Steel's 20-million annual output. He said the company was losing one million dollars a month on such items.

He explained that the company had the choice of raising prices or abandoning the marketing of semi-finished steel entirely.

Fairless said steel prices are not responsible for the high cost of living, asserting that they have gone up only 39 percent since 1940 compared with an advance of 108 percent in the wholesale price of all commodities.

Scout Leaders To Attend Meet In Columbus

Seven Pickaway County lead- ers are to be present at the an- nual meeting of the Central Ohio Council of the Boy Scouts of America, to be held Wednes- day in the Southern hotel in Col- umbus.

They are Harvey J. Fraser Jr., district field Scout executive here; Harold Clifton, Frank Wantz, John Magill and Richard Morris from Circleville; Willard Foreman, of Ashville; and Robert Christian, of Stoutsville.

The men attending the gath- ering will accept the Leon C. Roy award, a citation given for an increase in recruiting, for seven of the 11 Pickaway County Boy Scout troops.

At a meeting of leaders of the Pickaway district Monday, plans were completed to send 60 boys from all the troops for a two- day camping trip to Camp Laz- arus, Delaware starting Satur- day.

Also completed were plans for Pickaway Scouts to play host to a group of 160 Scouts from the Northwest District April 17.

Memorial Lake Not Part Of U.S. Program

An announcement made Tues- day in Columbus regarding the future of the Scioto-Sandusky Conservancy District will have no effect on the future of Pick- away County's long-awaited Memorial Lake and Park. H. A. Rider, state conservation com- missioner, has reported.

The announcement, made by C. C. Chambers, the district's chief engineer, declared that no dams would be built unless they were multi-purpose dams and were proven to be "economically justified."

Rider explained that Cham- bers' statement referred to the federal government's program and that it had no bearing on the local project.

Memorial Lake's future, Rider said, hangs in the balance. So far, the State Board of Con- trol has not released funds for the construction.

Steel Hike Explained

mand of CIO President Philip Murray for "a substantial wage increase" for nearly one million steel workers. Negotia- tions are expected to start soon.

Fairless said the recent price boost applied only to about two million tons of semi-finished ma- terials in U. S. Steel's 20-million ton annual output. He said the company was losing one million dollars a month on such items.

He explained that the com- pany had the choice of raising prices or abandoning the mar- keting of semi-finished steel en- tirely.

Fairless said steel prices are not responsible for the high cost of living, asserting that they have gone up only 39 percent since 1940 compared with an ad- vance of 108 percent in the wholesale price of all com- modities.

Divorce Ends Marriage Of 36 Years Ago

The dissolution of a 36-year-old marriage was one of three divorces granted by Judge William Radcliff in Pickaway County common pleas court.

Frederick S. Dowdy was given separation from his wife, Pearl M. Dowdy after a mutual separation agreement had been submitted to the court.

Mrs. Dowdy failed to appear in court to contest any of the petition's accusations.

The court holds a receipt for $4,000 which the defendant received as part of the settlement. Married since Nov. 29, 1911, the couple has no minor children.

Hazel Johnson, a minor, has been given divorce papers from her husband Daniel Johnson on grounds of gross neglect of duty. Her petition states they were married Feb. 16, 1945, at Everett, Wash., and have a two-year-old child.

JUDGE RADCLIFF ordered that the child remain at the husband's parent's home in South Bloomingville with permission for the plaintiff to visit.

A third decree was granted a husband from his 17-year-old bride, Eleanor Thomas who is accused of gross neglect of duty.

Kenneth A. Thomas' petition claims they were married Sept. 27, 1947, in Maysville, Ky., and have no children. The record says the wife refused to leave her parents and go live with the husband.

Rev. Mr. Kneisley said that "no matter whether a man be Jew, Catholic or Protestant, he must look to a supreme being and set up a program with his church."

The Methodist pastor discussed worship, what it means and the need for actual participation. He stressed the need for religious education and declared that "the spirit of brotherhood is required if peoples of this world are to live peacefully together."

He quoted German clergymen as saying the rise in power of the Hitler regime "could have been prevented if the Church had been alive and active."

The speaker urged a greater interest in the American Church and declared that "Jesus' 40 days in the wilderness should be proof that if one man was willing to go through that ordeal and later be crucified, we should be willing to spend two hours a week in church on Sunday."

Prior to the minister's address, Kiwanians heard a piano solo by Beverly Reid and a vocal solo, accompanied by Miss Reid, by Lucille Stambaugh.

LANGUAGE AND LEARNING

FOR YEARS it has been customary in many public school systems to arrange international correspondence between foreign language students in the American schools and students in the homelands of the languages under study. The letters helped in the language studies, and also provided an exchange of ideas and information with students in other lands. In Cleveland, O., schools the radio is now being used to carry this idea forward another step.

Under the new plan, interviews are arranged with groups of students in other countries, and these interviews are recorded. The recordings then are broadcast to language classes in the schools. To the advantage of the correspondence system is added the color of the spoken tongue. Recordings for the first year of the program are being made in Germany, France and Mexico.

There is grave need in America for a better understanding of the peoples of other parts of the world, for a sense of personal contact with them. The study of languages tends to stimulate the student to seek knowledge about the people whose tongue he tries to learn. Surely this program which brings to American class rooms the voices of students in other countries will help to provide and encourage this thirst for contact with other peoples. The whole future of the world might be changed if American children learned to know the children of other lands.

FINANCIAL DISCIPLINE

THE international situation recalls the old story of the woman who was asked how her church was getting along. "Not well," she replied, "but thank goodness, none of the other churches are doing any better".

In this spirit it will cheer some Americans to learn that the Russians aren't doing so well either. The Soviet budget message for 1948, copies of which have reached Washington, reports many examples, in the state-managed concerns, of incompetence and downright stealing. Instances which seem to be plain stealing are listed under the beautiful name of "infractions of financial discipline".

At least the Russian officials are not trying to cover up their backsliding. Not all American political organizations would be so frank.

On the other hand, American organizations are not usually anxious to accuse innocent people of wrong dealing, for their own political purposes.

It would be a sad and unfortunate situation if everybody were satisfied. Speaking in general, it's dissatisfaction that makes the world go round.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The other night I went to the theatre to see Ibsen's "Ghosts" and I got "Hedda Gabler". That has cured me permanently of blind dates with the theatre. I bought tickets by subscription for an Ibsen revival, only to discover that what I came to see had already died. Ibsen's "Ghosts" could not stand the strain of current actors, current reviewers and current audiences. In a word, it no longer fits the times.

On the other hand, Maurice Evans picks up such a dated piece as George Bernard Shaw's "Man and Superman" and fills the house. Also, Shakespeare is still a sell-out on Broadway year after year and Gilbert and Sullivan compete admirably with the moderns.

Is Ibsen then so dated that he who moved whole generations has no message for this one? Perhaps it is so. For instance, in "Hedda Gabler," much is made of the triangle. If you will read those who devote themselves to illicit human relations, you will note how ordinary and usual triangles are. In fact, it seems to be a mark of respectability to be noticed as having an affair prior to a divorce, while divorce itself has become a propriety.

It is possible that many of this generation do not understand why Mrs. Evlsted, one of the characters in this play, is so emotional over having left her husband by walking out on him, without a word, while he was away from home. There is nothing extraordinary about that. You can read of it all the time—I think it is called something like Renovating. Maybe I have that wrong, not having familiarized myself with the slang of the saloons. But there is some phrase which characterizes what this lady thought was heroic and emancipatory, while actually it is something that makes one a celebrity these days.

So naturally, there was no message in that. Nor could I see much of a message in the restless Hedda who, as played by Eva Le Gallienne, seemed to be a middle-aged Park Avenue wife of a businessman who today would spend much of her husband's earnings feathering the nest of a psychoanalyst who would undoubtedly tell her to sin and forget about it. This poor Hedda actually shoots herself when her lawyer friend gets the goods on her and indicates that he could blackmail her unless she consented to deposit her freedom on his conscience.

In our generation, the gal might shoot the lawyer and land a night club job out of having become a celebrity. Or she might divorce her husband and marry the lawyer and thus have the goods on him. Certainly, she would not shoot herself because the lawyer knew that she had encouraged a poor simp of a romantic philosopher to use her pistol to die beautifully. She would probably get a movie contract if he really died for her.

No, Ibsen is not for this generation. It is on all that he has to say. Even had I seen "Ghosts", it would have been the same. The sulfa drugs, penicillin and heat treatments have destroyed the message of that play. In fact, there is nothing to anything any more, and that is the truth. All you have to do is to become a celebrity and you make the grade no matter what you do. So why spend a night listening to Ibsen sermonize on the blackness of the human soul?

A man attains distinction when his mere memories become memoirs.

Symptoms of Sleeping Sickness

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FROM time to time, public imagination is caught and held by newspaper stories of children or adults who "sleep" for months, or even years, like the princess in the fairy tale. Unlike the princess, however, there is for many such people no joyful awakening, for they are victims of encephalitis or inflammation of the brain, a malady against which medical science has as yet no magic.

There are many forms of this disease, which is now known to be caused by several different viruses. It may also develop following other more common infections, such as measles or mumps.

Sleeping Sickness

The most important and best-known type of encephalitis is the one described by Dr. von Economo in 1916. It is known as lethargic encephalitis or sleeping sickness. At the present time, it seems to occur rarely, but widespread epidemics of it have broken out not only in the United States but elsewhere.

This malady usually occurs during the winter season, and it is thought that it develops about ten days after the person has been exposed to it. It may attack persons of any age, but is most common between the ages of ten and thirty years. Unfortunately, the exact manner in which this sickness is spread has not been determined, but it does not seem to spread directly from one person to another.

Three Stages

There are three stages of the disease: an acute period which lasts from a few days to several months; then a period during which there are few, if any, symptoms, this period lasting for several years; then there follows a chronic stage, which may last for the rest of the patient's life.

During the first stages of the disease, there may be sleepiness with little fever. On the other hand, in some cases, the patient is excited and overactive, with high fever. Sometimes the disease runs a very rapid course, with extremely high fever, convulsions, and similar symptoms. In some instances there are mild pains, double vision, headache, and sleeplessness.

Chronic Stage

In the chronic stage, there are twitches and trembling. There may be some paralysis, convulsions, and changes in the personality, together with disturbances of sleep.

Sleepiness is simply just one symptom—not the most common. It may start at the beginning of the illness and last for the rest of the patient's life. Usually it lasts for a few days, occasionally a few months, and then recovery follows. The thing to remember, however, is that sleepiness is a very rare symptom, and while dramatic and even accepted as an aid in naming the illness, it is still not too important.

This condition has been made the object of much study, but more information is needed concerning the method of spread, as well as ways of preventing and treating this disorder. The outlook for complete and permanent recovery is not always good in this disease; hence, it is important to search for measures to prevent this disorder.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. E.: Will you please tell me what causes dropsy?

Answer: Dropsy means swelling of all the tissues of the body, due to the presence of excessive amounts of fluid in them. In practically all cases, this condition is due either to heart or kidney disease.

The treatment for dropsy depends entirely upon the cause. In heart disease, digitalis is usually given. In kidney disease, the amount of fluids is restricted and a diet low in protein and salt is given.

SYNOPSIS

Attractive Kit Marshall was elated when the employment agency she had registered with upon arriving in New York offered her a position as social secretary to glamorous Tracy Field, one of America's most publicized heiresses. It was arranged that Miss Field's chauffeur would drive Kit to the Connecticut estate where her employer was spending the summer. Dining sumptuously in celebration before returning to her room to pack, she was amused when an affable young man who was leaving the restaurant chided her about having an enormous appetite. Kit's parents had died when she was a baby and she had lived happily with her kindly Aunt Chris in Washington until three months ago when a spiteful friend had disclosed publicly that Kit's father once served a prison term for theft. When Aunt Chris reluctantly admitted it was true, she had resigned her job and come to New York to start anew. Kit had ready when Cecil, Miss Field's chauffeur, arrived. However, she was not the only occupant of the luxurious car, for there in the back seat sat the young man of the restaurant episode. He introduced himself as Mike Grissold, a newspaperman and had friend of her prospective employer. By the time they arrived Kit knew she had found a real friend in the cynical but kindly Mike. They were met by Mrs. McIntyre, the housekeeper, who showed Kit to her room. Mike found Tracy, of whom he was fond in a big way, sort of way, watching "er cousin Tony Merryman (who with his wife, Anita, were more or less permanent guests) playing tennis with Kirk Griswold, good-looking guest of the Lanahans who had the neighboring estate. Tracy had been in and out of his room many times during the years Mike had known her, and from the sound of her voice as she talked of Kirk, he knew it had happened again.

CHAPTER SIX

WITH his eyes still narrowed Mike saw that Kirk Griswold was a tall, rangy, loose-jointed young man with light brown hair and fine features. Mike liked his looks and bearing. Even at tennis he had dignity and assurance and precision.

He grinned at Tracy. "A serious young business man, the man's man type. Very good but not for you, darling."

"Oh, stop it, Mike. He's modest. He's even shy."

"He's the next candidate, isn't he?"

"He doesn't know it."

"Hard to get, eh? Mind on his work..."

"Don't be horrible."

"Who's being horrible? I know I'm going to like him better than the conceited actor and radio announcer. They were awful. By the way, where's Anita? Where's everybody today?"

"It is sort of quiet here today."

Anita will be back shortly. "They're your permanent house guests for the summer, I take it. The charming young Merrymans, Tony and his spouse..."

"They had to give up their apartment."

"You mean they were bounced for not paying their rent?"

Tracy shrugged. "What could I do? I couldn't let them starve. Tony is my cousin..."

"But a degree from Harvard isn't enough to get a job. Nope, I guess not. It wouldn't buy Anita mink coats and winters in Palm Beach and summers here. Pity. My heart goes for the poor, healthy, young, expensive, educated things..."

"You don't understand, darling."

"What's so hard to understand about it? Tony is all right. I like him. A little spineless but a good guy. And handsome. Anita's equally good looking for a girl but with plenty of spine for getting out of unpleasant things that sound like work and harmful, I'll bet, if things were not going her way."

But Tracy wasn't listening. She cried out, "Good shot!" to Kirk Griswold.

"Excuse me," Mike said. "This is where I came in..."

"I'm sorry." She looked at him again. "You're staying for the weekend, aren't you?"

"I work for a living. Remember? I'm going back tonight. I don't like your house. It's too big. One of these days I'm going to slide down the banisters. I've been dying to do that and also to yell to hear the echo. How about a swim?"

"I'll go in when Kirk and Tony are finished with their game." She yawned, stretched her thin arms over her head and shook her hair loose. "I suppose I should take a look at this paragon Fallon has sent me..."

"Yes, you should," Mike said soberly. "She isn't a paragon. She's a girl, a human being. She has thoughts and feelings, hopes and dreams. She has a past and a future. Take a look is right. She's mighty good to look at, sister."

Mrs. McIntyre had gone away, leaving Kit alone in a large, sunny room. It was quite the most attractive room she had ever seen, with frilly white organdy curtains at the windows, substantial looking maple furniture, a fresh patterned hooked rug and a fresh bowl of flowers on the desk. The dressing table was a white ruffled affair and the large maple bed had a ruffled canopy. Only the typewriter on the desk plied with unopened mail made it a room in which there was work to be done. Kit pulled off her blue turban. Inside she was quivering, feeling strange and nervous and excited. She did not know where to begin. It seemed that in so short a time she had come such a long way—from the serene, uncomplicated existence with Aunt Chris to the biggest house in which she had ever been and with people unlike any she had ever known before. And it certainly wouldn't do to look scared. She walked to the window glad that from her room she could see the tennis court and the swimming pool. Two men were playing tennis and Mike was sprawled lazily on the grass beside the court. Mike—a friend? I never needed a friend more than I need one now. All at once I haven't any friends. I'm alone—

At knock on the door she turned quickly. "Come in..."

And Tracy came in with her quick graceful walk, smiled at her condescendingly and came forward to hold out her hand boyishly.

"I'm Tracy Field. Your oops, I'm afraid. Everything all right here? I told Mac to have your room put in order for you."

"It is, thank you. It's a lovely room."

So this was Tracy Field—slender, big-eyed, light-haired with a beautiful voice and a nervous and arrogant manner. Tracy in a white silk shirt and tan jodhpurs...

Later, though not yet, she was to think of Tracy always in motion, never in repose. For she was rarely still. She walked to the desk now and fingered the mail.

"This is it." She poked a bored finger at the small mountain of envelopes. "One of them if you will have to use your own judgment. The other more personal things you'll have to see me about." She shrugged. "I'm afraid my system isn't too good. There are times when I simply can't put my mind to these things."

Kit said, "I understand."

"You'll take my phone calls and attend to the household accounts. Mac will explain it to you. It's difficult to outline the things to be done. You'll work into them. And about your meals—I've always found it a good idea to have them sent up to the secretary. It will keep you from running into the servants. Makes it pleasanter for you, really." Sitting on the desk, she relaxed for the first time. "Oh, yes, about your time off. Saturday afternoons and Sundays all day, of course. This isn't a big job and you'll have a good bit of free time. And, of course, in such an arrangement as this, people must be informal. Use the pool when you like. Do you play tennis?"

"Yes, I do."

Tracy smiled. "Good. We often need another person."

His first theatrical venture was in Haverhill, Mass., where he rebuilt a small theater and booked such stage and screen attractions as the Boston Opera company, Maude Adams in "Peter Pan," and the Farnums in "The Little Rebel." From this beginning Mayer acquired control of all five theaters in the town. Then, with Nat Gordon, he formed a circuit—the largest in New England. Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a dark morning with the barometer steady near the storm marker, a fact that may mean almost anything and undoubtedly this, being March. Noted iris rearing their foolish heads, but they always are so anxious for Summer that they just can't wait. Most optimistic of all flowers. When cold grips them and snow covers them they just make the best of it and resume growing the minute Winter turns its back. I like the iris because of its bulldog determination to get where it is going and its refusal to be discouraged.

Further indications of Spring in the mail. Seed, bulb and shrub catalogs. Further proof that anticipation generally is more pleasant than realization. The flowers are so beautiful in the ads, so different in my garden. Manager Herbert Frey at Cussins and Fearn showed and demonstrated a fine new garden tractor and was edging into a sales talk until advised that my garden this Summer will consist of two tomato plants. I don't need a tractor for them. Don't even need a basket to carry away the fruit. Probably will be none.

New mystery novel coming on the market March 17—"Wilders Walk Away." Have read it and found it excellent, driving straight to the point from the first to last chapter, not leading the reader up to a thrilling point and then taking at least a chapter detour clear around by the way of Sweeney's. When I read a mystery story, which is not often, I work through three or four chapters to become acquainted with the characters and then jump to the final chapter. Let others be lost in the maze of back roads. I like novels to stay on the beam. "Wilders Walk Away" does that. Interesting reading all the way.

The author? Herbert Breen. Known to many of you as the son of Mrs. Charles G. Shulze of South Court street who recognizes the house in the novel as her former home in Vermont, also some of the characters in the novel as friends and acquaintances. Breen in his first novel was on familiar ground when he wrote "Other people die of mumps

Or general decay. Of Fevers, chills and other ills But Wilders Walk Away."

Breen is an editor of Life, a student of Sherlock Holmes and an authority on Early Americana and antiques. He has had first-hand acquaintance with murders and policemen as a newspaperman and was among those sent to track down John Dillinger, being fortunate enough not to find him. At the United Press he quickly came to the attention of his superiors as the only writer man they ever hired who did not know how to use a typewriter. He worked for the Detroit Times for ten years, became assistant city editor and picture editor. Five years ago he became the Detroit new bureau head for Time, Life and Fortune, winding up in New York as editor for Life. He gets his daily workout by walking briskly past the tennis rackets and rowing machines in Abercrombie and Fitch's windows.

And Mrs. Shulze is proud. She has a right to be. And you may treat yourself to a pleasant evening with "Wilders Walk Away."

Certainly, she would not shoot herself because the lawyer knew that she had encouraged a poor simp of a romantic philosopher to use her pistol to die beautifully. She would probably get a movie contract if he really died for her.

No, Ibsen is not for this generation. It is on all that he has to say. Even had I seen "Ghosts," it would have been the same. The sulfa drugs, penicillin and heat treatments have destroyed the message of that play. In fact, there is nothing to anything any more, and that is the truth. All you have to do is to become a celebrity and you make the grade no matter what you do. So why spend a night listening to Ibsen sermonize on the blackness of the human soul?

A man attains distinction when his mere memories become memoirs.

Symptoms of Sleeping Sickness

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FROM time to time, public imagination is caught and held by newspaper stories of children or adults who "sleep" for months, or even years. Like the princess in the fairy tale, unlike the princess, however, there is for many such people no joyful awakening, for they are victims of encephalitis or inflammation of the brain, a malady against which medical science has as yet no magic.

There are many forms of this disease, which is now known to be caused by several different viruses. It may also develop following other more common infections, such as measles or mumps.

Sleeping Sickness

The most important and best-known type of encephalitis is the one described by Dr. von Economo in 1918. It is known as lethargic encephalitis or sleeping sickness. At the present time, it seems to occur rarely, but widespread epidemics of it have broken out not only in the United States but elsewhere.

This malady usually occurs during the winter season, and it is thought that it develops about ten days after the person has been exposed to it. It may attack persons of any age, but is most common between the ages of ten and thirty years. Unfortunately, the exact manner in which this sickness is spread has not been determined, but it does not seem to spread directly from one person to another.

Three Stages

There are three stages of the disease: an acute period which lasts from a few days to several months; then a period during which there are few, if any, symptoms, this period lasting for several years; then there follows a chronic stage, which may last for the rest of the patient's life.

During the first stages of the disease, there may be sleepiness with little fever. On the other hand, in some cases, the patient is excited and overactive, with high fever. Sometimes the disease runs a very rapid course, with extremely high fever, convulsions, and similar symptoms. In some instances there are mild pains, double vision, headache, and sleeplessness.

Chronic Stage

In the chronic stage, there are twitches and trembling. There may be some paralysis, convulsions, and changes in the personality, together with disturbances of sleep.

Sleepiness is simply just one symptom—not the most common. It may start at the beginning of the illness and last for the rest of the patient's life. Usually it lasts for a few days, occasionally a few months, and then recovery follows. The thing to remember, however, is that sleepiness is a very rare symptom, and while dramatic and even accepted as an aid in naming the illness, it is still not too important. This condition has been made the object of much study, but more information is needed concerning the method of spread, as well as ways of preventing and treating this disorder. The outlook for complete and permanent recovery is not always good in this disease; hence, it is important to search for measures to prevent this disorder.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. E.: Will you please tell me what causes dropsy?

Answer: Dropsy means swelling of all the tissues of the body, due to the presence of excessive amounts of fluid in them. In practically all cases, this condition is due either to heart or kidney disease.

The treatment for dropsy depends entirely upon the cause. In heart disease, digitalis is usually given. In kidney disease, the amount of fluids is restricted and a diet low in protein and salt is given.

SYNOPSIS

Attractive Kit Marshall was elated when the employment agency she had registered with upon arriving in New York offered her a position as social secretary to glamorous Tracy Field, one of America's most publicized heiresses. It was arranged that Miss Field's chauffeur would drive Kit to the Connecticut estate where her employer was spending the summer. Dining sumptuously in celebration before returning to her room to pack, she was amused when an affable young man who was leaving the restaurant chided her about having an enormous appetite. Kit's parents had died when she was a baby and she had lived happily with her kindly Aunt Chris in Washington until three months ago when a spiteful friend had disclosed publicly that Kit's father once served a prison term for theft. When Aunt Chris reluctantly admitted it was true, she had resigned her job and come to New York to start anew. Kit was ready when Cecil, Miss Field's chauffeur, arrived. However, she was not the only occupant of the luxurious car, for there in the back seat sat the young man of the restaurant episode. He introduced himself as Mike Saunders, a newspaperman and friend of sort of way, watching a cousin Tony Merryman (who with his wife, Anita, were more or less permanent guests) playing tennis with Kirk Griswold, good-looking guest of the Lanhans who had the neighboring estate. Tracy had been in and out of love many times during the years. Mike had known her, and from the sound of her voice as she talked of Kirk, he knew it had happened again.

CHAPTER SIX

WITH his eyes still narrowed Mike saw that Kirk Griswold was a tall, rangy, loose-jointed young man with light brown hair and fine features. Mike liked his looks and bearing. Even at tennis he had dignity and assurance and precision.

He grinned at Tracy. "A serious young business man, the man's man type. Very good but not for you, darling."

"Oh, stop it, Mike. He's modest. He's even shy."

"He's the next candidate, isn't he?"

"He doesn't know it."

"Hard to get, eh? Mind on his work..."

"Don't be horrible."

"Who's being horrible? I know I'm going to like him better than the conceited actor and radio announcer. They were awful. By the way, where's Anita? Where's everybody today?"

"It is sort of quiet here today."

Anita will be back shortly."

"They're your permanent house guests for the summer, I take it. The charming young Merrymans, Tony and his spouse..."

"They had to give up their apartment."

"You mean they were bounced for not paying their rent?"

Tracy shrugged. "What could I do? I couldn't let them starve. Tony is my cousin..."

"But a degree from Harvard isn't enough to get a job. Nope, I guess not. It wouldn't buy Anita wink coats and winters in Palm Beach and summers here. Pity. My heart goes out to the poor, healthy, young, expensively educated things..."

"You don't understand, darling."

"What's so hard to understand about it? Tony is all right. I like him. A little spineless but a good guy. And handsome. Anita's awfully good looking for a girl but with plenty of spine for getting out of unpleasant things that sound like work and harmful. I'll bet, if things were not going her way."

But Tracy wasn't listening. She cried out, "Good shot!" to Kirk Griswold.

"Excuse me," Mike said. "This is where I came in..."

"I'm sorry." She looked at him again. "You're staying for the weekend, aren't you?"

"I work for a living. Remember? I'm going back tonight. I don't like your house. It's too big. One of these days I'm going to slide down the banisters. I've been dying to do that and also to yell to hear the echo. How about a swim?"

"I'll go in when Kirk and Tony are finished with their game."

She yawned, stretched her thin arms over her head and shook her hair loose. "I suppose I should take a look at this paragon Fallon has sent me..."

"Yes, you should," Mike said soberly. "She isn't a paragon. She's a girl, a human being. She has thoughts and feelings, hopes and dreams. She has a past and a future. Take a look is right. She's mighty good to look at, sister."

Mrs. McLintyre had gone away, leaving Kit alone in a large, sunlit room. It was quite the most attractive room she had ever seen, with frilly white organdy curtains at the windows, substantial looking maple furniture, gaily patterned hooked rugs and a fresh bowl of flowers on the desk. The dressing table was a white ruffled affair and the large maple bed had a ruffled canopy. Only the typewriter on the desk piled with unopened mail made it a room in which there was work to be done. Kit pulled off her blue turban. Inside she was quivering, feeling strange and nervous and excited. She did not know where to begin. It seemed that in so short a time she had come some long way—from the serene, uncomplicated existence with Aunt Chris to the biggest house in which she had ever been and with people unlike any she had ever known before. And it certainly wouldn't do to look scared. She walked to the window glad that from her room she could see the tennis court and the swimming pool. Two men were playing tennis and Mike was sprawled lazily on the grass beside the court. Mike—a friend? I never needed a friend more than I need one now. All at once I haven't any friends. I'm alone.

At a knock on the door she turned quickly. "Come in..."

And Tracy came in with her quick graceful walk, smiled at her condescendingly and came forward to hold out her hand boyishly.

"I'm Tracy Field. Your boss, I'm afraid. Everything all right here? I told Ma to have your room put in order for you."

"It is, thank you. It's a lovely room."

So this was Tracy Field—sleender, big-eyed, light-haired with a beautiful voice and a nervous and arrogant manner. Tracy in a white silk shirt and tan jodhpurs... Later, though not yet, she was to think of Tracy always in motion, never in repose. For she was rarely still. She walked to the desk now and fingered the mail.

"This is it," she poked a bored finger at the small mountain of envelopes. "On some of it you will have to use your own judgment. The other more personal things you'll have to see me about." She shrugged. "I'm afraid my system isn't too good. There are times when I simply can't put my mind to these things."

Kit said, "I understand."

"You'll like my phone calls and attend to the household accounts. Mac will explain it to you. It's difficult to outline the things to be done. You'll work into them. And about your meals—I've always found it a good idea to have them sent up to the secretary. It will keep you from running into the servants. Makes it pleasanter for you, really. Sitting on the desk, she relaxed for the first time. "Oh, yes, about your time off. Saturday afternoon and Sundays all day, of course. This isn't a big job and you'll have a good bit of free time. And, of course, in such an arrangement as this, people must be informal. Use the pool when you like. Do you play tennis?"

"Yes, I do."

Tracy smiled. "Good. We often need another person."

JOBS UPON A TIME

Louis B. Gaylor, vice president of Metro-Motion Pictures, once was a ship-salvager. His first theatrical venture was in Haverhill, Mass., where he rebuilt a small theater and booked such stage and screen attractions as the Boston Opera company, Maude Adams in "Peter Pan," and the Farnums in "The Little Rebel." From this beginning Mayer acquired control of all five theaters in the town. Then, with Nat Gordon, he formed a circuit—the largest in New England. With a group of other men he later founded a picture corporation which led him to Hollywood where he went into production. Seven times he was president of the Association of Motion Pictures.

'Round Circleville - - - - - Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a dark morning with the barometer steady near the storm marker, a fact that may mean almost anything and undoubtedly does, this being March. Noted iris rearing their foolish heads, but they always are so anxious for Summer that they just can't wait. Most optimistic of all flowers. When cold grips them and snow covers them they just make the best of it and resume growing the minute Winter turns its back. I like the iris because of its bulldog determination to get where it is going and its refusal to be discouraged.

Further indications of Spring in the mail. Seed, bulb and shrub catalogs. Further proof that anticipation generally is more pleasant than realization. The flowers are so beautiful in the ads, so different in my garden. Manager Herbert Frey at Cussins and Fearn showed and demonstrated a fine new garden tractor and was edging into a sales talk until advised that my garden this Summer will consist of two tomato plants. I don't need a tractor for them. Don't even need a basket to carry away the fruit. Probably will be none.

New mystery novel coming on the market March 17—"Wilders Walk Away." Have read it and found it excellent, driving straight to the point from the first to last chapter, not leading the reader up to a thrilling point and then taking at least a chapter detour clear around by the way of Sweeney's. When I read a mystery story, which is not often, I work through three or four chapters to become acquainted with the characters and then jump to the final chapter. Let others be lost in the maze of back roads. I like novels to stay on the beam.

"Wilders Walk Away" does that. Interesting reading all the way.

The author? Herbert Brean. Known to many of you as the son of Mrs. Charles G. Schulz of South Court street who recognizes the house in the novel as her former home in Vermont, also some of the characters in the novel as friends and acquaintances. Brean in his first novel was on familiar ground when he wrote

"Other people die of mumps

Of general decay, Of Fevers, chills and other ills But Wilders Walk Away."

Brean is an editor of Life, a student of Sherlock Holmes and an authority on Early Americana and antiques. He has had first-hand acquaintance with murders and policemen as a newspaperman and was among those sent to track down John Dillinger, being fortunate enough not to find him. At the United Press he quickly came to the attention of his superiors as the only rewriter man they ever hired who did not know how to use a typewriter. He worked for the Detroit Times for ten years, became assistant city editor and picture editor. Five years ago he became the Detroit new bureau head for Time, Life and Fortune, winding up in New York as editor for Life. He gets his daily workout by walking briskly past the tennis rackets and rowing machines in Abercrombie and Fitch's windows.

And Mrs. Schulz is proud. She has a right to be. And you may treat yourself to a pleasant evening with "Wilders Walk Away."

Monday Club Hears Address By Joseph Burns On 'Gems'

All Phases Discussed

Joseph Burns, local jeweler, and one of the few registered jewelers of the American Gem Society, addressed members of the Monday Club on "Gems", at their session Monday evening in Memorial hall.

He said the subject of gems and gemology is a highly technical one and rather than "bore" his listeners with technicalities he would discuss the history, romance and interesting facts concerning gems. He said:

"Gem stones have personalities—even as persons have. Some baubles are very pretty at first glance—you buy them, wear them for a week and they lose their appeal.

"This same feeling is apparent with gems. When you are shown a genuine ruby, emerald or a diamond, you wonder what there is about this jewel to make it worth the hundreds of dollars a carat at which it is valued. But if you buy a fine gem of this nature, each time you look at it you see some beauty in it and after you have owned it for a number of years, it becomes as close and as dear to you as a friend."

Mr. Burns spoke of gems whose beauty and interest lie principally in their color, namely the emerald, ruby, sapphire, garnet, amethyst, chrysoberyl, opal and jade, and usually referred to as semi-precious. Quality and rarity determine the value of each stone.

NEXT COMES THE NCAA

Michigan Double-Slams, Wins Big 9 Cage Crown

CHICAGO, March 2.—The Wolverine has double-slammed. It was Southern California and the Rose Bowl for Michigan's football team; it'll be Madison Square Garden, New York, and the NCAA championship for Michigan's basketball team, which last night won its first undisputed Western Conference title in 21 years.

The official bid selecting Michigan as district four representative to the NCAA tournament has not yet been made, but it is one of those taken-for-granted things.

The Maize and Blue basketballers easily thrashed second-place Iowa, 51 to 35, at Ann Arbor last night.

It was the first time in 18 years that one school has put football and basketball titles back-to-back in the Big Nine, and Michigan did it the hard way, winning in a league where one mistake is two too many.

THE TALLY for the Wolverines was 10 victories and two defeats in conference play, Iowa, which could have tied Michigan for first place by winning last night, ended up two games back at 8-4.

Illinois defeated Indiana, 52 to 51, at Bloomington, last night, and Minnesota topped Wisconsin, 46 to 41, at Minneapolis; all of which left Illinois and Wisconsin tied for third with seven victories, five defeats each.

Pete Elliott, a great defender for Michigan's football team, is equally great on defense in basketball.

He held Murray Wier, record-breaking pointmaker from Iowa, to 14 points last night, and Elliott himself put Michigan ahead to stay in the second half with a fielder from far out.

Then, with a record 8,800 fans screaming loudly, Michigan's Mark Suprunowicz hit for five straight field goals.

WIER WOUND UP leading the league's scorers with 272 points in conference competition. Minnesota's Long Jim McIntyre, who again last night was held to two points, still managed to hold second place with 215. Ohio State's Dick Schnittker was third with 204.

Final conference standings follow:

	W	L	Pts	Pts Pk
Michigan	10	2	647	556
Iowa	8	4	643	612
Wisconsin	7	5	608	623
Illinois	7	5	602	638
Purdue	6	6	608	655
Minnesota	5	7	616	638
Ohio State	5	7	657	673
Indiana	3	9	626	643
Northwestern	3	9	594	653

Play Bridge With BARCLAY

ATONE FOR YOUR SINS
IF YOUR own smart Alecky bidding had apparently egged the opponents into a better contract than they probably would have reached if you had acted more sanely, you are in grave danger of losing your partner's confidence. The case is likely to be so desperate that you must come across with something spectacular if you are to restore the entire cordiality with that important person across the table from you. In brief, to atone for your sins, you must perform a near-miracle.

♠ J 10 9 5 4	♥ A 8 5 3	♦ K Q 9	♣ 9
♠ A 6	♥ Q 7 4	♦ A Q J	♣ 10 8 4 3 2
♠ N	♥ W	♦ E	♣ S
♠ K Q 8 7 3	♥ K 4	♦ A J 3 2	♣ 7 5

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 NT	3 ♠	4 ♥
4 ♠	4 NT	5 ♠	Pass
Pass	Dbl	Robl

West—what might be called a "ground and lofty tumbler" among bidders—made his two bids of No Trumps as barriers against his opponents, hoping they would double and make him run out in Clubs, then double the Clubs. When they didn't fall for it, he decided their bidding as high as they did was partly because his own haywire bidding made them think his hand was weaker defensively than it actually was. That's why he doubled them—that coupled with his partner's single bid which indicated some probable defensive ability.

When North redoubled, West decided that stern measures were necessary in the play, especially since he was subjected to severe glares from across the table. So he started by leading the singleton Q of his partner's heart suit. When that was won in the dummy, the spade J was sent to his A.

Now West put on his thinking cap. If he could only get East in the lead, a heart ruff would beat the contract. The only high card out of sight which could make South's bidding completely sound was the diamond A, so he doubtless held it. East's only chance therefore to have a high card was the club K. Hoping for that, West led the club 2. When the K won and the heart J was ruffed, the winning partnership was restored.

Play Bridge With BARCLAY

ATONE FOR YOUR SINS
IF YOUR own smart Alecky bidding had apparently egged the opponents into a better contract than they probably would have reached if you had acted more sanely, you are in grave danger of losing your partner's confidence. The case is likely to be so desperate that you must come across with something spectacular if you are to restore the entente cordiale with that important person across the table from you. In brief, to atone for your sins, you must perform a near-miracle.

West—what might be called a "ground and lofty tumbler" among bidders—made his two bids of No Trumps as barriers against his opponents, hoping they would double and make him run out in Clubs, then double the Clubs. When they didn't fall for it, he decided their bidding as high as they did was partly because his own haywire bidding made them think his hand was weaker defensively than it actually was. That's why he doubted them—that coupled with his partner's single bid which indicated some probable defensive ability.

When North redoubled, West decided that stern measures were necessary in the play, especially since he was subjected to severe glances from across the table. So he started by leading the singleton Q of his partner's heart suit. When that was won in the dummy, the spade J was sent to his A.

Now West put on his thinking cap. If he could only get East in the lead, a heart ruff would beat out of sight which could make South's bidding completely sound was the diamond A, so he doubtless held it. East's only chance therefore to have a high card was the club K. Hoping for that, West led the club 2. When the K won and the heart J was ruffed, the winning partnership was restored.

Caution Urged In Use Of 2,4-D Formula

Some Risk Involved, Expert Says

Ag Agent Tells Good, Bad Points

The use of DDT formula 2,4-D for corn field weed control will be used by many Pickaway County farmers this year to produce a healthier, more productive crop.

L. A. Best, county agriculture agent, has issued a warning, however, to county farmers who are contemplating the use of the new chemical weed killer.

In his report Best said: "The use of 2,4-D to control weeds appears destined to be an important aid in corn growing. With proper precautions, it may profitably be used this year, certainly in emergency situations. There are many things that we do not know and some risk is involved. Its use will not replace cultivation. Best declared.

PRE-EMERGENCE treatment is more expensive than post-emergence, but may possibly be the most effective method of using 2,4-D. For this year, it is only recommended for trial on a few rows. Such trials are desirable on many farms in all parts of the state.

For killing seedling broad-leaved weeds in corn beyond the 2-leaf stage, from 1/4 to 1/2 pound of 2,4-D acid per acre is suggested. Less 2,4-D acid per acre should be used in ester forms than in the various salts of 2,4-D. Grass weeds will not be killed.

The hazard in using 2,4-D in fields producing double-cross hybrid seed corn is not known. It is probably small, but unquestionably there is a chance that it exists.

If 2,4-D is used in such fields, the doses should not exceed those just stated. Use on seed corn fields only in a severe emergency, Best cautioned.

Fields for the production of single-cross hybrids should not be treated with 2,4-D. Inbred lines are much more sensitive than the single or double crosses. Not only the plants but their progeny have shown 2,4-D injury.

FOR USE on corn and most other crops, sprayers are recommended which put on five to 10 gallons per acre at pressures of 25-35 pounds. Sprayers for 2,4-D on crops which apply 100 or more gallons per acre are definitely obsolete.

Varieties of all crops may vary greatly in their susceptibility to 2,4-D. This is one of the major uncertainties in its use.

Winter wheat may be treated in the spring before it starts to joint or after it is in the milk stage without serious injury, even at moderately high doses.

Oats may be treated after the milk stage and perhaps before they start to joint, certainly with doses sufficient to remove mustard. Young

Cline Renamed Law Librarian

Guy G. Cline, Ashville attorney, has been reappointed for a second term as Pickaway County Law Librarian. Cline replaced Kenneth Robbins two years ago. The librarian receives an honorary salary of $500 per year which is turned back into the library fund for the purchase of books and supplies.

Funds Altered

CHARDON, March 2—Geauga County will transfer $50,000 from the county's huge surplus fund to the road and bridge fund, an extensive plan for improvement of highways and bridges.

clover and alfalfa may be killed by these treatments, Best declared.

"Go slow," Best urged. "After all, we have gotten along without 2,4-D for a long time. Except for emergency uses, it might be better to get along without it for another year than to make costly mistakes. Where weeds, if not controlled, will take the crop, as happened in so many situations in 1947, 2,4-D can be a lifesaver. In this way, it can be an important adjunct to increasing production in this year of need."

Clinton County Eyes Pickaway; Wants Coliseum

Officials of Clinton County, eyeing Pickaway County's new $80,000 Fairgrounds Coliseum, announced this week they would attempt to float a bond issue at the May primary election to finance a similar structure in Wilmington.

Headed by Carl H. Shanks, superintendent of Clinton County schools, the Wilmington backers are shooting higher than did Pickaway.

Present plans call for a building which will seat 4,000 persons but which will follow a pattern similar to the Pickaway structure.

A delegation from Clinton County is soon to visit the Circleville Coliseum and confer with local authorities on their problem.
